I have a rMBP 13 I bought in 2015 and loved it, but it just won't get past the "Optimal preboot session" option. It doesn't see any USB or Ethernet, and won't boot unless I hold the power button down. How can I get it to boot properly?! There are no visible problems. Also, is there any way to install Win 10 on an SSD, or is it factory installed? It's a very late 2015 model that wasn't upgraded from any other OS, and I don't think it ever had a system repair. I've used acronis disk director and it would not boot from the install disk, and the optical drive does not work. A: I found a solution to my own question! This is from a thread on apple support: Hello, I can reproduce this condition on my own MacBook Pro (Late 2015, 15-inch, fully working, with the same optical drive). I suggest this: Step1: Shut down and hold down the option key while powering on Step2: When the power on screen shows up, release the keys as soon as it shows up but before it starts. This will give you to option to go to the "Optimal preboot session" screen. According to the link, this usually fixes it. I've found and confirmed it fixes this specific issue, but I don't know how permanent it will be. Cancer is a metabolic disease, and neoadjuvant treatment can alter the metabolism of the tumor, even to the point of irreversible metabolic changes. Even minor variations in metabolism can result in significant changes in tumor sensitivity to targeted therapy. For example, the AKT inhibitor perifosine has a synergistic effect with metformin
