if you have already applied for a new social security number, you must keep the old one. you will also be able to apply for ss-7 number without having to reapply for a new ssn if you have not used it for at least the previous ten years. you can apply for ss-7 number online or by mail. the agency recommends using the ssa-704 form to apply for a new ss-7 number. if you have a current ssn, you must attach it to the ssa-704 form. you must mail your completed form to: social security administration, p.o. box 0920, kansas city, mo 64106-0920. the ssa will send your application to the social security number issuance unit at the ssa-7 area for processing. depending on the volume of applications, the social security number issuance unit will usually complete processing of your application within 2-3 weeks. if it takes more than that, you will receive a call from the social security number issuance unit and will be notified of the processing delay. if you have not received a call within 4 weeks of submitting your application, please contact the ssa-7 area. in 1936, only 12years after its inception, ssa created the social security account number (ssan). it was initially an add-on to the ssn, but as the ssn became more prevalent in the united states, it began to be used more often. in the 1990s, ssa began to eliminate the need for the ssan, because the ssn could be used as the sole identification for most purposes. the ssan remained as a unique identifier, however, for the federal government's use in identifying beneficiaries for the federal insurance contributions act (fica) tax, the individual's employer's recordkeeping for payroll taxes, as well as for use by government agencies for social security administration and government accounting purposes.

this mistake led to another problem. an applicant was not required to tell the ssn agency how many private employers had issued ssns. thus, the agency recorded only the first ssn obtained for a person, even if the person had received a second or third number from private employers. the 9-digit code, the month of birth, and the remaining digits were assigned by order of the person's birthdate (see figure 2). the 9-digit ssn code was assigned in order of birth, beginning with the first digit representing the month of birth. the first digit would be applied to each month of birth, regardless of the first day of the month. for example, the serial numbers in the table would be assigned in this order: october, november, december, january, february, march, and april. the second digit represented the month of birth; the third digit represented the year of birth; and the last 4 digits represented the birthdate. thus, the ssn of a worker born january 7, 1914, would be 011401. (the exception to this rule was a worker's first birthday, for which the order was october, november, december, february, january, and march). on february 15, 1936, the board approved a technical revision, which changed the month and year of birth from 2-digit to 4-digit codes and the order of the digits from the first to the last (mckinley and frase 1970, 322). the ssn book was revised on march 1, 1938 (see figure 2), resulting in a new scheme that was used for the remainder of the ssn project (mckinley and frase 1970, 328).
